John is a highly experienced HR consultant, business partner and coach. His experience ranges across the automotive, creative and media, IT and public sectors. He has worked in line management roles, including sales and marketing, and purchasing as well as a full range of functional roles across HR. He has operated successfully at both senior executive and board levels.

After a career in which he headed up the HR functions in three successive organisations John started his own HR consulting business in 2000. He has subsequently focused on supporting client organisations that are going through significant change. He has been successful in becoming a genuine HR business partner for a number of fast growing SME's. He has seen first hand the power that a coaching approach can bring to the facilitation of change.

John holds an MSc in Organisational Behaviour, and is a Chartered Member of the CIPD. He is an active member of the CIPD, and is currently the Co-ordinator for the HR Consulting Special Interest Group of the West London branch. He is also BPS certified to Level B for Occupational Testing, and is an NVQ Certified Assessor (D32/33).

John is a noted team player and clients have commented on how quickly he builds positive and productive relationships. He is also resourceful and well organised, with a high standard of professionalism, dedication and personal integrity. In his spare time he applies qualities to a thriving community charity he runs in West London.
